The same old story still continues to come from Albany—the Legislature balloted once and adjourned.

When the President and ex-President politely bow to each other at Long Branch, the news spreads all over the beach with marvelous rapidity, and newspaper correspondents write whole columns about it.

Associate Justice Stanley Matthews, of the United States Supreme Court, has one of the finest collections of oil paintings of any private individual in Ohio, and to prove that an Ohio man can be generous as well as lucky, he has given the entire collection to the Cincinnati art museum.

When the Mississippi press association had their last convention they adopted a resolution that each paper in the State shall hereafter charge $15.00 for the formal announcement of an aspirant's candidacy for office. As there are more than fifty thousand men in Mississippi who want office, the $15.00 from each candidate will make an immense revenue to the poor editors of that State.

There is no doubt the story of Colonel Robert Ingersoll becoming a billionaire, is greatly exaggerated. While he may have a rich mine in New Mexico, it is not worth "countless millions" as is first reported. When the Colonel returned from the scene of the great discovery, he was interviewed, and said the mine was a one, he thought, but how rich, he could not tell. When the country expected he would soon rise to the high position of a rich bonanza king, he was asked what he would do in the future, and "Bob" answered: "I intend, in the future, to do—that is the best I can. I expect to now and then give my ideas about religion and politics, parsons and office-holders—whether the mines turn out well or ill."

There is a vast difference in the way the wives of prominent politicians take life in Washington. It is said when Mrs. Hayes was a Congressman's wife that she was just as popular as when she occupied the White House, and never was a Martha, "troubled about many things." She would sit on the door-step of her boarding house with a water-proof over her head, and chat merrily with other boarders and win the good opinion of all. But Mrs. Garfield is a Martha of old. She never had many intimate friends, is shy, and is always deeply engrossed with domestic affairs of life, and many times these have weighed heavily upon her, and since she has been elevated to the White House, the load has not been removed.

When you speak of an office, Ohio, suddenly and mysteriously comes to the front. She is ever present when important public patronage is to be disposed of, and it is her lot to get more than her share. One of the most prominent candidates for Speaker of the House of Representatives is General Keifer, and he comes from Ohio, but he is a good man for the place all the same. He made a gallant soldier during the war and makes a very excellent member of Congress. Politics lightning seems to strike Ohio so easily that there would be no surprise if she would get the speakership. President Garfield said last fall that Ohio had enough, and the people say she has had enough; but the State still continues to gobble the best political places and still cries for more. If Ohio does not get the speakership it will strike the people as being a strange phenomenon.

Four weeks ago on Tuesday, of this week, the fight began at Albany for the vindication of Conkling and Platt. Thirty joint ballots have been taken in that time, and a glance at the vote will show that both of the ex-Senators are farther from being vindicated than they were when they began the fight. They have gone so low in the table of ballots that there can be no hope that they will hereafter rise to the dignity of the leading candidates. One would naturally suppose, viewing the case from a common sense point of view, that they would quit the field under these circumstances and do that which would bring together the conflicting elements in the Legislature and agree upon a compromise and thus bring a fortunate end to the foolishness which has been going on for more than a month. A little display of manly judgment and political wisdom that will build up, is better than a trial of endurance which can do nothing but pull down.

Cooking seems but on the scheme of forcing a new party. Nothing could be more pleasing to the Republicans. Janesville Gazette.

The above item is significant in showing the best of Rock county Republicans. But such a scheme must be regarded as a most unfortunate one. It possibly may please some, but such a consummation can not fail but to result in disaster to the party in the Empire State. On second thought Conkling will reject any such idea even if he now holds to it. Review Journal.

The Janesville Gazette never said any such thing about Conkling as the Journal credits to this paper, and therefore it does the Gazette a great injustice to charge it with publishing an editorial item which is perfectly barren of common sense. Not satisfied with calling the Republicans of Rock county ingrates and political assassins, the Racine Journal now wants to charge the Republicans of this county with favoring the scheme to organize a new party. There seems to be precious little honor attached to the political management of the Racine Journal.

THE TWENTY-NINTH.

The Friends of Each Senatorial Candidate Remain Firm—No Change.

ALBANY, June 28.—The twenty-ninth ballot which marked the beginning of the fifth week of voting for Senators to succeed Conkling and Platt, shows clearly that the members of the Legislature have taken their stand in regard to the leading candidates, and that little change is to be hoped for as long as they remain in the field. Conkling and Platt have not gained a man since the first week, but their forces are so completely under their master's control that only three have deserted. The rest, although becoming impatient and anxious to break away, dare not do so, and host, like the Old Guard, that they will never surrender. Dewey reached his highest numerical strength just when the Bradley bribery bomb was exploded. Right after that he gained two members, but has since lost four or five. His followers stick to him faithfully, but there are murmurings in the ranks, and the losses are more likely to occur here than among the Bucks. The friends of the other administration candidates, who have laid aside their own personal preferences to advance Dewey, say that he has been given a fair trial, that his election is proved to be an impossibility, and that he ought now to withdraw his name so as to give the others a chance to display their strength. His managers are as yet unwilling to allow this. They hope that the Legislature will decide that the bribery charges are not proved. Then, they assert, there would be a general rally to this much-abused candidate. As long, however, as Dewey is a candidate, there is no prospect of the election of any other administrationist.

HON. J. ALLEN BARBER.

GALENA, Ill., June 23.—The Hon. J. Allen Barber, who was well known throughout the entire lead region, departed this life at 2 o'clock this morning, after a short illness, at the family residence in Lancaster, Wis., of peritonitis. The deceased represented his district in the Fortieth and Forty-first Congresses, having been succeeded by the Hon. Henry S. Magoon. Previous to his election to Congress he had filled several important offices in his State, including those of Assemblyman and State Senator. He was one of the oldest members of the Wisconsin Bar, and one of the pioneers of that State, having settled first in Platteville in 1813, and at about that time thereafter in Lancaster. The deceased was a native of Northern Vermont, and was born in 1810, near the village of St. Albans. He was a Republican in politics, and was not only a learned lawyer, but was regarded as one of the leading statesmen of the Northwest. He leaves a wife, two sons and two daughters. One of the sons is Lieutenant Allen Barber, of the Navy, a graduate of Annapolis, and at present on duty at the Brooklyn Navy-Yard. Ex-Congressman Barber was one of the wealthiest citizens of Southern Wisconsin at the time of his death.

THE COMET.

NEW YORK, June 23.—A Paris dispatch says: For the last two nights the comet has been remarkably brilliant, and our astronomers tell us it is to-night to attain its apogee. After that its splendor will diminish, and in three weeks we shall have seen the last of it for seventy-four years. The comet gave rise to an interesting discussion at the Academy of Sciences yesterday. Jansen informed us it measured several million leagues. Its head, as seen here, appears to be spherical and is surrounded by a luminous halo, giving a peculiar brightness. It has no body worth speaking of, but the tail is immense, and is so transparent that stars of the second magnitude are seen behind it, and are clearly reproduced in photographs which Jansen has taken.

FELL DEAD AT HER FEET.

LITTLE ROCK, June 28.—The details of another tragedy were received to-day from Chinnerville, Logan county. Walter Wilson and his wife, living in the vicinity, had been on bad terms for a long time; the husband accusing her of unfaithfulness. The charge further estranged them, and the wife returned to her parents. Wilson followed her, called her into the yard, and urged her to return home with him, when all would be forgotten and forgiven. The woman refused peremptorily, whereupon Wilson drew a pistol, placed it at his forehead, drew the trigger, and a moment later fell dying at her feet. He lived only a short time.

"When I publicly testified that I had been cured of a terrible skin humor by the Cuticura Remedies, I did so that others might be cured, and do not regret the time given to answering inquiries."—Hon. William Taylor, Boston.

H. E. Carpenter, Esq., Henderson, N. Y., cured of Boresia or Leprosy, of twenty years' standing, by the CUTICURA RESOLVENT internally, and CUTICURA and CUTICURA SOAP externally. The most wonderful case on record.

FATAL ACCIDENTS.

RACINE, June 28.—John Korer, a well-to-do farmer of the town of Caledonia, in this county, was accidentally killed yesterday while raising a barn on his premises. A falling timber struck him and broke his neck.

LITTLE ROCK, June 28.—W. E. Lee, a wealthy planter of Sevier county, on yesterday, while getting ready to start in search of some stray cattle, took down his rifle, and thinking it empty, placed his foot on the trigger, to blow through the barrel, when it was discharged, the contents entering his head and scattering his brains in all directions. He leaves a wife and five children.

MAILED ME.

Debt, poverty and suffering haunted me for years, caused by a sick family and large bills for doctoring, which did no good. I was completely discouraged, until one year ago, by the advice of my pastor, I procured Hop Bitters and commenced their use, and in one month was well, and none of us have been sick a day since; and I want to say to all poor men, you can keep your families well a year with Hop Bitters for less than one doctor's visit will cost.—A Working-man.

A CORNER-STONE.

APPLETON, June 28.—The corner-stone of the Outagamie county $10,000 court-house was laid this afternoon with Masonic ceremonies. A large throng witnessed the doing. Speeches were made by citizens and others. The edifice will be completed October 1.

STEAMBOAT EXPLOSION.

CINCINNATI, June 27.—The steamer Phaceton exploded her valves a short distance above Maysville, Ky., at 1:30 this afternoon, and is a total wreck. The lost are:

Cash Naylor, engineer, Manchester, Ohio.

Samuel Reynolds, porter, Maysville, Ky.

Joseph Carr, deck hand, (colored), Maysville.

Joseph Miller, deck sweep.

A passenger (name unknown) is supposed to be lost.

Among the injured are D. B. Smith, of Cincinnati.

Bassom Cooper, of Manchester.

M. K. McArthur, of Chicago.

Tim Seever, of Chicago, (fatally).

John Conn, Marietta.

Most are slightly injured. The Phaceton was a small side-wheel steamer in the local trade between Vanceburg and Manchester. She was valued at $5,000.

SALE OF A WOOLEN MILL.

WAUKESHA, June 28.—The Waukesha woolen mills was sold yesterday to Joseph J. Hadfield, of Milwaukee, for $28,000. About a month ago the establishment became financially embarrassed, and was closed by the sheriff. All the machinery in the factory is new, and, with the building, cost $75,000. The former help will be retained.

High Heels and Lane Backs.

A reporter, crossing the Fulton Ferry some days ago, was made an unwilling listener to some feminine confidences on backache. As all women and the greater part of their men folks are directly or indirectly interested in the subject, the reporter visited a man of science who was named by one of the young ladies as having cured her trouble.

"Oh, yes," said the doctor, "backache is very common among women; more than two-thirds of them suffer from it. But there is one kind of this trouble, caused by a prevailing fashion, which women ought not to allow themselves to suffer from."

"Are you a specialist for fashionable backache?"

The doctor laughed. "I will tell you all about it," said he. "Three years ago a fashionable young lady called upon me, saying that her back was very lame, and had been so for a considerable time; the pain had lately so greatly increased that she had become frightened about herself. She had been obliged to shorten her promenades, so she said, was almost incapable of dancing, and her life was gradually becoming a burden. She had 'tried everything,' and taken medicine all the time, but—then she broke down in such a way that I began to suspect hysteria."

"She looked tired, and her face bore an expression of pain and despondency which was not compatible with her years—she was about 23—nor her evidences of constitutional force, which I judged to be strong. I confessed I was at a loss to account for her trouble, and close questioning gave me no indication of treatment. I at last prescribed a tonic—on general principles—and asked her to call in about a week. When she appeared again, a glance sufficed to show that she was no better, and I was much puzzled as I saw her walk up and down the office in nervous excitement, exclaiming that she would never get well, she knew she wouldn't, etc. As I looked, a certain peculiarity in her walk led me to think that there might be some spinal trouble, and I commenced a cross-examination, which she brought to a sudden close by saying: 'Why, doctor, several of my friends are suffering just as I am, but they are not yet so worn out with the pain; we can not all have spinal complaints, can we?'

"I thought it impossible, of course," continued the Doctor, "and the interview ended by my asking her to call again on the next day and bring one of her friends with her, when I would make another effort to discover the real cause of the trouble. I had, in fact, made up my mind that some peculiarity in dress was at the root of the difficulty. The ladies called, and had hardly traversed the office before I observed in patient number two the same idiosyncrasy in walking which I had seen in the first patient. I was not long in discovering that the real difficulty lay in the high and tapering heels of my patients' gaiters. Close examination revealed the fact that there was a difference in the height of the boot heels of the two ladies, and I found that my first patient, who was the greater sufferer, was the one whose gaiters possessed the higher heels. There was nothing to do but to prescribe slippers and woolen stockings for a week, to be followed by the wearing of shoes having low, broad heels."

"And it was this treatment which cured the backache?"

"All signs of lameness disappeared within a few days, and my first patient of this kind, together with many who have followed her, regained their health and strength. There are many physiological reasons why undue elevation of the heel must cause trouble. It will suffice to say that it serves to throw forward the contents of the abdominal cavity and the strain upon the muscles, nerves and cords more or less connected with or surrounding the back are subjected to unusual strain in resisting the forward impulse. Of course, in such cases, lame back is not of itself a disease, but only the indication of deep-seated trouble, which is sometimes difficult to deal with. Ladies should be warned that this fashion in heels is certain to bring them—sooner or later—great trouble. If they must adhere to the prevailing style, they should take care to wear slippers on every possible occasion which the sacred duties they owe to fashion may permit. That a person may as well be out of the world as out of fashion is a law more inexorable in the minds of many women than those of nature or of health."

A Glimpse of Lisbon.

We floated this morning down the Tagus, the glittering panorama of the city unfolding before us. Its houses, built of creamy, marble-like stone, terraced the hill-sides, forming a stately staircase, down which Lisbon stepped as a queen to the water's edge. We could not dispute her claim; whatever city may be ranked first for beauty of situation, Lisbon can be classed no lower than second among all the cities of the globe. Its wonderful atmosphere bathed all with a golden glamour. The tiled fronts of the houses, which, nearer, suggest patchwork, basked in the sun, and their glazed surface like so many gems; dome and cupola, church tower and palace facade, outlined themselves in graceful profile against the sky, as exquisite as a poet's dream, and as unreal as some prehistoric legend.

A nearer view of Lisbon streets, while it dispels in a certain degree the vision-like enchantment of the distant picture, brings out details of never-ceasing interest. We spend our days in long walks and drives up and down mountainous streets, that wind and climb, criss-cross, angle, and lose themselves in labyrinthine tangles, blind alleys, or pleasant squares. We wonder alike at the bizarre costumes of the lower classes, and the similarity to American—or rather Parisian—styles displayed by the more well-to-do. We saunter along the quays, and study the faces and gait of the people, and the much upon the street, and it is here that they are to be studied to the best advantage. The houses of the poor open to it, and we have a full view of the home life from the narrow sidewalk. In the more elegant quarters the wistaria droops in purple festoons over the balustrades which edge the roof, while spots of rosy pink or vivid scarlet tell of blossoming oleanders or cacti, for the roof of one row of houses often forms its own garden, or that of the houses upon the next terrace. These hanging gardens reminded the eccentric Beckford of places of interment, "as if the deceased inhabitants of the palace were sprouting up in the shape of prickly-pears, Indian figs, gaudy hollyhocks, and peppery capsicums."

Here and there roofs of red semi-cylindrical tiles projected over the house fronts, suggesting the fluted frill of an old lady's cap. Everywhere there was sparkling color and dazzling light. Sometimes the tiles on the fronts of the houses formed mosaics of gigantic figures, vases of flowers, and baskets of fruit; now and then, above some rustic lantern, which in Southern time served the double purpose of illuminating the streets and burning in honor of the sacred pictures above them, the tiles shaped themselves into Madonnas, martyrs in flames, and saints in glory—a circumstance which called from the merry poet the bon-mot, "These saints are the most enlightened personages in Lisbon." If the streets of Lisbon were dark in Southern time, they have blazed with light since the advent of gas; the poor saints alone remain in the obscurity of the Dark Ages. Lizzie W. Champney, in Harper's Magazine.

It is but a little more than a hundred years since a candidate for the degree of Master of Arts at Harvard took the affirmative on a paper gravely discussing the question, "When the shadow went back on the sun-dial of Hezekiah, did the shadows go back on all sun-dials?"

The Prime Minister of Greece.

M. Comourdours, whose name and whose views so often crop up in dispatches from Athens, has had a very remarkable career. At the end of the last century, his family were the Chiefs of Malina, whose inhabitants had always preserved their freedom and independence. Comourdours betook himself to Athens to pursue his studies, but he distinguished himself rather as a leader of his fellow-pupils, than by severe application. While thus engaged, the Cretans broke out into revolt. To Crete he went, where he fought and was wounded. He was conveyed to his home, and as soon as he was cured of his wounds he returned to Athens to continue his studies. On their completion he settled in a provincial town, and remained there until 1856, when he was sent to Athens as a Deputy. There he speedily made his capacity as a leader of men felt. He was chosen President of the Chamber, and a few days later became a Minister. Since then he has been the acknowledged head of the party of action, but it was not until 1866 that he took a leading part in foreign affairs.

Many stories are told of his fearless courage. Once an old soldier, who had been dismissed from some small post, determined to kill him. The would-be assassin waited for him at the door of the Ministry, and on his appearance raised a loaded pistol, and pointed it at him. Comourdours rushed forward, snatched the pistol from the man's hand, and held him until the arrival of the guard. Finding, on inquiry, that injustice had been done to the man, he reinstated him a few days later in the post for which he had been dismissed.

Here is another story: When Otto had been expelled, Comourdours and his friends made prisoner Leotsakes, the Colonel of a regiment that was acting against them. A report reached the regiment that Leotsakes had been killed, and they managed to seize on Comourdours, in order to slay him. Nothing daunted, Comourdours pretended to regard himself as their guest, and so effectually did his courage and eloquence stand him in good stead, that he and his captors were soon engaged in drinking toasts to their common country.

As a Minister, his chief fault is that he never knows how to refuse anything to his friends, and, owing to his amiable weakness, there are men about him who might be better away. He is now about sixty years old, and possesses a wonderful facility for work, often reading official documents and giving orders to half a dozen subordinates at the same time. To his untiring energy it is due that Greece has now sixty-five thousand men under arms, well drilled and well equipped.—London Truth.

Tantivy Coaching.

A correspondent to the New York Star thus writes of New York coaching: "The fresh air, the fine horses, the delightful sense of quick motion, the charming scenery, the slight but interesting incidents of the journey, the splendid appetite which the substantial lunch at Yorkers abundantly satisfies, and, sometimes, the good-fellowship of my fellow-travelers, go to make up what may be most emphatically pronounced 'a good time.' But as I pay my five dollars for my seat, or tip the guard with a trustful dollar, I can not help asking myself what fascination there is in driving which induces my friend, the wealthy owner of the equipage, to make a coachman of himself and spend laborious days in whipping up four horses at an expense which would pay a regular driver handsomely. There was once a mad lord who drove the Guilford coach in England, and, if he took a fancy to his passengers, would give them a tremendous supper at his own expense, at the end of his journey. There was some fun at that. To study the characters of his chance acquaintances, and see how they warmed up over the wine was excellent fun for the mad lord. But the coachmen of Tantivy never think of giving or accepting suppers, except from their friends, and as they sit mumchance during the journeys and take no part in the fun which often goes on behind their backs among the passengers, I am at a loss to know how they get any enjoyment out of their daily routine. Having looked and paid for my seat, I light my cigar, decline to recognize the person who drives in any other capacity than as a coachman; tip him and the guard at the journey's end, and think that he is rather a snob for taking my money. His excuse is that the English noblemen do the same thing. My excuse is that having paid for my seat I ought not to be called on to pay any more. Fancy feeling the engine of an railway train. Sometimes the drivers attempt to enter into conversation with me about society matters; but I will not permit it. If they choose to masquerade I will not disturb their disguise. If they want to play at being coachman, they shall be coachman so far as I am concerned. I should no more think of talking society to a man who deliberately crowds some poor but honest coachman out of his place and pockets his wages. If there be any practice more totally un-American than driving a Tantivy coach, I can not recall it at present."

—A young German wine merchant, unable to dispose of his goods, was sitting disconsolately reading the newspaper when he noticed that a convivial old baron, famous for his fondness for Rhine wine, was dead. Seizing one of his letter heads, the young man penned a note thanking the baron for his kind order of a few days before, said the wine would be forwarded at once and inclosed his bill. The message and wine were received by the heirs who, overjoyed at falling into a good property, said the merchant's bill, promptly drank the wine, and gave the dealer whom the baron seemed to have favored, an extensive order. The young man's custom increased steadily and at last his fortune was made.

EMERALD GROVE.

Mrs. E. Chesbro and her daughter, Mrs. David Cummings, started on Monday last on an extended tour for the east. The public school closed on Thursday last. The teacher, Miss Schenck, distributed some handsome presents among her pupils.

Mrs. Damsore, of Red Wing, Minn., is visiting her sister, Mrs. Russell Cheney.

Joseph Stoller sold out his stock of goods to J. Fellows, of Johnstown Center, last week.

Mrs. A. C. Munger returned home last Friday, after an absence of six weeks, visiting friends and relatives in Elkhorn and Racine.

Report of Emerald Grove school for the spring term: Number registered, 47; average attendance, 31. Perfect in deportment: Lelia Goodrich. Those above 95 in scholarship: Wm. Jackson, Robert Jackson, Hattie Jackson, Libbie Jones, Frank Hardy, Roy Cheney, Nellie Squires, Maud Filkins, and Martha Beesley.

DELIA SCHENCK.

Teacher. —Charley Jones left for Dakota on Wednesday. He is looking for a farm. —Mr. John Cummings, A. G. Ransom, E. Heller and Wm. Brown start soon for Dakota.

Grandmother.

Used to say: "Boys, if your blood is out of order try Burdock tea," and then they had to try the Burdock tea and had it down in kettles, making a nasty smelling decoction; now you get all the curative properties put in a palatable form in BURDOCK BLOOD PURIFIER. Price $1, trial size, 10 cents.

Sold by A. J. Roberts and Sherer & Co.

FAIRFIELD.

—Rev. James Richardson preached at Richmond last Sunday afternoon, and his place here was filled by the Rev. Dr. Bowers of Clinton. The latter holds service at Bradford Center every Sunday morning.

The literary society will meet on Saturday evening, July 2. There were sixty in attendance at the last session.

—Miss Hattie Fredlund of Clinton, made her friends here a brief visit last week. She has a good place in the Clinton post-office.

—Bert Welch has an elegant new carriage.

Mrs. Whitlock, of Chicago, will come up soon to spend the summer.

A strawberry and ice cream festival was held in the church last Thursday evening, which added something to the organ fund.

B. S. Hargrave, telegraph operator at Savannah, Ill., who recently has been promoted agent, and is now at Racine.

—Arthur Fredlund, recently of New York, arrived in Clinton a few days ago, and is now visiting here, where he used to live about a dozen years ago.

—John Bradley, representing the Sugar-Loving machine Co., visited his old acquaintances here this week.

—Clover, which is plentiful, is being cut and gathered. Barley is heading out rapidly.

—There was a select torchlight entertainment at Clarence Brown's last Friday evening.

Virtue Acknowledged.

Mrs. Ira McMillan, Albany, N. Y., writes: "For several years I have suffered from off-occurring bilious headaches, dyspepsia, and complaints peculiar to my sex. Since using your Burdock Blood Purifier I am entirely relieved. Price $1.50, trial size 10 cents. Sold by A. J. Roberts and Sherer & Co."

CENTER.

—The age of broken backs, or tobacco setting, is about over with. The acreage is larger than last year.

—A large number of our young folks attended the closing exercises at Whitewater normal school, last week, after which they attended a picnic at Clear Lake.

—Mr. W. C. Parmenter and the Misses Hattie and Anna Cleland, and Mary Spoon, of the Whitewater normal school, returned last week.

The prize given by Center grange for the best quart of strawberries, was carried off by Mr. J. W. Quimby. They were without any exception the finest specimens that we have ever seen.

—Mr. B. A. Parmenter started last week for Nebraska, where he was joined by his brother, C. A. Parmenter. They start this week for Wyoming Territory, where they intend dealing quite extensively in stock.

—Corn is looking well, and will more than average knee high by the Fourth.

—Osgood is coming. Watch.

—The next meeting of the Y. P. M. Club will be held at the residence of Seth Fisher, on Friday evening of this week. Miss Huxley, of Magna, will favor the club with some fine selections on the piano.

—Mr. Barnes, of Whitewater, is in town visiting friends.

—There will be a meeting of the Temple of Honor Saturday evening.

—Our young folk will celebrate the Fourth in January.

—Young people's meeting at the Disciple church on Saturday evening. Let all attend.

—Elder Milton Wells, of West Virginia, accepted the call from the congregation of Disciples at this place, to preach for them for one year, preaching every Lord's day at Center church, at 10 o'clock a. m., and at Foot, at 4 o'clock p. m.

How to Secure Health.

It seems strange that any one will suffer from the many derangements brought on by an impure condition of the blood, when SCOTT'S SERRAVALLO AND STILLINGIA, or BLOOD AND LIVER SYRUP, will restore perfect health to the physical organization. It is indeed a strengthening syrup, pleasant to take, and has proven itself to be the BEST BLOOD PURIFIER ever discovered, effectually curing Scrofula, Syphilis, the disorders, Weakness of the Kidneys, Erysipelas, Malaria; all Nervous disorders and Debility. Bile is complaints and all Diseases indicating an impure condition of the Blood, Liver, Kidneys, Stomach, Skin, etc. It is so simple, and so easy as a health renewer, for it ACTS LIKE A CHARM, especially when the complaint is of an exhaustive nature, having a tendency to lessen the natural vigor of the brain and nervous system.

BAKER'S PAIN PANACEA cures Pain in Man and Beast. For use externally and internally.

DR. ROBERTS' VEGETABLE WORM SYRUP instantly destroys worms and removes the Secretions which cause them.

Geo. Meredith, Jersey City, writes: "The SERRAVALLO you sent me has had the happiest effect on my daughter; her headache and depression of spirits has vanished. She is again able to go to school, and is as lively as a cricket. I shall certainly recommend it to all my friends. Price 50 cents; trial size 10 cents. For sale by A. J. Roberts and Sherer & Co."

Our Young Readers.

OUR LITTLE KING.

His kingdom is the nursery. And mother's lap his throne. His subjects—all the household, Over which he reigns alone. We monarch of our household be, This white-robed, blue-eyed "Willie wee."

We speak in softest whispers When'er he lies asleep. And at the dainty slumberer Take many an anxious peep; And e'en a fly can hardly dare To brush the silken, golden hair.

And every twinkling dimple In neck and cheek and chin, Is where we snuggle kisses And kiss them deeply in; For loving baby so, you see, A bundle of sweet love is he.

And when our King awakens, For his first glance we run, And fast the glad news travel— "The monarch's nap is done!" And on his throne he sits in state, While loyal subjects on him wait.

No king ever ruled a kingdom As ruling over Willie wee. O'er hearts as fond and loyal As ever heart could be. Let little our little King so fair, With sweet blue eyes and golden hair!

—Mary D. Bruce, in Youth's Companion.

LIZZIE'S FIRST DAY AT SCHOOL.

"Lizzie!"

"How the little girl started! 'Lizzie,' again mamma repeated; 'if you'll mind baby for an hour, tomorrow you may go to school with Cady.'"

"And wear my new ruffled apron?" exclaimed Lizzie, throwing down all her playthings, and jumping to her feet, she clasped her hands in very glee.

"Yes," returned the indulgent mother, "but you must not murmur during the hour, or in any way be unkind to Baby Fred."

"O, I'll be the goodest little girl in the wide world, mamma, the very goodest," and little Lizzie spun round and round, until Grandma declared it made her own head grow dizzy to watch her.

The low-spoken, "Be quiet, dear," by mamma, who was tying her bonnet in front of the large mirror, was answered by:

"I can't, mamma, I'm so happy."

"Happy—happy—happy!" she kept repeating, stooping over the cradle where Baby Fred lay fast asleep.

First, she said, "happy" in a whisper; then louder and louder, until grandma had again to reproach her.

"Yes, dear," mamma once more said, "you must be quiet; rock the cradle every time baby stirs," and she kissed the little, rosy lips, and went out.

"Going to school!" meant for Lizzie what a journey through Wonderland might mean for you and me.

Over and over, until it did seem that grandma's patience must be completely worn out, had Lizzie said:

"If Cady can go to school, why can't I?"

"Cause I isn't old enough!" she would exclaim, when grandma tried to explain the reason. "I's big as Cady! That's nuffin, grandma; nuffin't all."

Now, she was really going to school, if only for half a day, and in anticipation of the event she was quiet, after mamma went out, and did not bother grandma with a single question.

When Freddy awoke, she found for him the prettiest, bright-colored block which possessed great attraction for the blue-eyed baby, and to him also, she confided:

"I'm going to school to-morrow!"

"Co-o-o-o," replied Freddy.

"Yes, I am," affirmed Lizzie, "and wear my ruffled apron, too."

Baby, who crowed long and then, and threw down over so many blocks with a bang! which made grandma jump, as she slept in her easy chair. But baby did not cry, and when mamma returned, she was convinced that Lizzie had earned the favor.

It was only down one street, then around the corner, and a few steps up another street to the school-house.

"Take but a minute to get there," Lizzie said, when they started.

So many girls! Why, in all her life before Lizzie had never seen so many at one time. When the bell rang, however, they dispersed themselves into different rooms, so that by the time she was seated at the desk with Cady there were not so many new faces.

It was not like school as she expected to find it, though Lizzie's little imaginative brain had associated the school-room with her class at Sunday-school, and when the teacher assumed a commanding voice the dear little girl grew frightened, and wished herself at home.

But after she began watching the scholars at their studies she forgot all about it, only it was terrible to be quiet for so long a time.

They read pretty stories that interested her, and recited their lessons very nicely, so it seemed to Lizzie. The class in geography was the most astonishing of any.

When the teacher asked a little girl about the shape of the earth, she told her, "It's round, like a ball or an orange."

In reply to another question concerning its motions, she said that it "made two revolutions; one daily, the other yearly."

Then followed explanations. There was a big wooden globe, which swung on pivots, that the teacher said represented the earth. By turning it over and over, she showed her scholars how the earth turned on its axis and revolved around the sun.

The little girls reciting their lessons could comprehend it, but Lizzie could not. She began wondering how it was possible for the world we live in to turn over and over and not upset everybody.

Dear little Lizzie! She did not consider the number of years she had already lived, and that papa and mamma and grandma had lived a great many more, and had never yet been upset by the turning over of the world.

No; she did not reason at all, only grew more frightened while they talked about it. Cady came now and then, and Lizzie thought, to she folded her arms on the desk, making quite a comfortable pillow for her poor little head that fairly ached with the amount of knowledge so shortly obtained. There she lay, until it was time for the school to dismiss.

"Too tired to talk about school to-night, please," Lizzie replied to grandma, papa and mamma, when they questioned her. "I'm whole home before her bed time Lizzie declared she was sleepy, and said:

"Please, mamma, hear me say my prayers, now," and by the time she was fairly "tucked up" in her little bed the blue eyes closed, and she never knew that mamma kissed her good-night.

How long she had been asleep she did not know, but the first thing she remembered when awaking was that the clock turned over.

"Likely as not," Lizzie began to conjecture, "it begins turning over in the morning, 'cause it's so big, it would take it all day to roll over. Why, of course," she concluded, "it would have to get turned over by night-time, so as to be all ready to begin now in the morning." And what if she should slide off, or if the bed should turn upside down?"

"Cady!" she called, "Cady!"

But Cady was sound asleep, and the door leading into mamma's room was closed, too. What could she do! The more she thought about it, the more frightened she grew. Just then she remembered that the under drawer of the bureau pulled completely out. It was big enough for her to get in and lie down. "And it's so low," she reasoned, "that if the earth rolls over, she wouldn't be smothered, as she could by the mattresses and heavy bed-clothes that would fall on her in case her own little bed went bottom-side up."

So she pulled out the drawer and dragged it into the middle of the room, and instead of blankets to keep her warm, she put another night-dress over the one she already wore, and then buttoned her heavy roller over all, and tried to lie down. But dear little she had to "cuddle all up in a little heap," just like kitty in the basket.

When grandma came in next morning to call the little girls she was very much alarmed, supposing, of course, that Lizzie was forming the habit of walking in her sleep.

Before waking her, she called papa and mamma.

"What shall we do?" exclaimed the frightened mother.

"Consult our physician at once," papa was saying, when the sound of their voices caused Lizzie to open her eyes.

"O, papa! mamma!" she said, before trying to get out of the bed, "has the world got turned over?"

Each looked at the other in astonishment.

"Tell me, grandma," she continued, reaching her little pink-colored foot over the edge of the bureau drawer, "has the earth rolled way over?"

"She is thinking about the geography lesson," Cady laughed, sitting up in the bed, and looking at Lizzie. "Yesterday's lesson was about the motions of the earth."

"Yes," interrupted Lizzie; "all about the earth rolling over and over, and making folks turn somersets."

How papa laughed! So did mamma, and grandma laughed and laughed.

Then papa took Lizzie right up in his strong arms, and tossing her on to his shoulder, carried her into the nursery.

After his merriment had subsided, he told her that every evening she repeated her little prayer, and asked God to take care of her through the night.

"Has He not done so?" papa questioned.

Lizzie said, "Yes."

Then papa explained to her that the earth was cared for in the same way—the earth, and all that live on the earth. He told her, also, that there was knowledge too vast for her little brain to comprehend, but as she grew older, she would be capable of attaining to the same, as was Cady and her older brother.

"You must love mamma, grandma, Baby Fred and your older brothers and sisters."

"And papa," Lizzie interrupted.

"Yes, and papa," he repeated, kissing the little upturned face, and folding Lizzie close in his arms. "Love every one, dear; be kind to all your little playmates, but always keep in mind that if you obey rightly, and learn the lessons to be taught you, you need never fear that God will not govern aright this great, big, wonderful world, which He made," and papa kissed her two or three times, over and over.

Ask your mamma, little boy and little girl, to tell you about little Lizzie's perplexity.—Golden Rule.

"What Will People Say?"

With some people the all important question is: "What will people say?" With them it is not so much the accomplishment of some object of merey, some work of value to individuals or society, some enterprise that promises good to communities of people, some benevolence that essays to reform and improve humanity; not any nor all of these are so important to some people, as the momentous, the vital, the all-absorbing question: "What will people say?"

How many stand aloof from any great undertaking, waiting, thinking, wishing, yet fearing to move forward, simply because they do not feel quite sure that the desired movement will be sanctioned by public opinion! And yet these people claim to represent public opinion.

Remember! The public opinion is the opinion of the world of sentiment, feeling on the weaker impulses of the mind that would grow stronger by proper use; and wait, and wonder, and dream, and ask themselves: "What will people say?"

How many good people have lived, and now live, waiting for a propitious moment to begin some great and needed reform, because of too much timidity and a fear that they may not strike the popular chord of public sentiment! While these should note that though the public mind may be indisposed to try new methods, may be averse to reforms that an individual may think of most importance, still should they remember that the public always has a disgust for the coward; and will always prefer the honest, out-spoken individual who is earnest in whatever he undertakes, than the timid, the weak, the vacillating individual who never dares to undertake anything, but wastes his life, asking himself: "What will people say?"—Young Folks' Rural.

What Durango Sighs For.

We want girls! Girls who can get themselves up in good shape to go to a dance. The boys are getting tired of receiving invitations with a request that they "bring ladies." They are like oranges and apples—very scarce. We want girls who will go to church and to Bible class on Sunday, and that kind who can draw a congregation of the other sex and who will take a buggy ride after the season is over. This will help the lively business, and will also hasten the sale of residence lots; for buggies are the vehicles in which homes are first thought of by many people. We want girls who can wait on the table, who can smile up an appetite when stomach bitters are impotent, and who will make the boarders regular at their meals. We want girls for sweethearts, so that when we get an arm shot off, kicked by a mule, or are thrown from a bucking horse and are laid away for repairs, we may hear a gentle voice and see the glitter of a crystal tear spoken and dropped in unconscious sympathy for our pain.—Durango (Colo.) Record.

Fashions in women are constantly changing, and the brunettes has now been shelved for the glorious girl with the red hair—not lemon color, nor low, nor coral color, but the genuine red. Big mouths have also been discarded, and the woman who cannot take in tea saucer is considered passe and second class.

PERSONAL.

—Miss Fannie Hill has gone to Oshkosh to spend the summer there with relatives.

—President Stearns, of the Whitewater Normal school, is in the city, visiting his brother, C. A. Stearns.

—Victor Richardson, a West Point cadet, and son of Hon. Hamilton Richardson, arrived home to-day.

—Henry Hart, of St. Paul, the never sleeping life insurance man, arrived in the city yesterday afternoon.

—Dr. E. W. Beebe, the well known artist and oculist, now located in Milwaukee, was in the city to-day.

—Mrs. Frank Brooks expects to join her husband in Eau Claire in the course of a week, he having decided to settle there permanently, the new firm being Hendrix & Brooks.

—Judge S. A. Hudson and daughter leave to-day for Dakota, to take up their permanent residence there. Many friends here will miss both, and the best wishes of all go with them to their new home.

—Dr. Atkinson, of Arizona, is in the city visiting his sister, Mrs. Judge Couger, and en route for his old home in Pennsylvania. He formerly resided here and his old acquaintances will be interested in the following kindly notice of him given by the Tucson, Arizona, Journal, of recent date:

Dr. M. Atkinson leaves to-day for his old home at Meadville, Pennsylvania, his first visit in 17 years. The doctor's career has been a remarkable one. He is 60 years old, and has been a scout, trapper, soldier, hunter, and prospector variously since 1846, and is one of the few survivors of the few hardy brave men who acted as pioneers of civilization on the plains and in the mountains of the great West. A surgeon of fine talents, Dr. Atkinson adopted his romantic life from choice, and his love of adventure amidst the grand solitude of nature has been amply gratified. As a surgeon he served through the Mexican war, which period formed the only interval during the past 35 years, when he has been dwelling on the outskirts of civilization. His wanderings have taken him from Panama to the waters of the Arctic Ocean, and his knowledge of the wilder sections of this continent is perhaps more extended than any other living man. A kindly, genial, intelligent old man, there are thousands of citizens of the frontier who will wish Dr. Atkinson a safe journey and a pleasant visit.

—There is to be no smoking or peanut munching in the new Municipal Court.

—William Buck has been given the contract for building the new band house in the park.

—St. Patrick's temperance band is to have a dance in Cannon's hall on the evening of the Fourth.

—W. H. Corey and Will Shaffer, of Footville, on the 18th of this month, set 14,400 tobacco plants in four hours. Do they not capture the confection on speed?

—In one of Prentice & Evenson's show windows appears a life-like picture of the front row in the parquet. Every bald-headed man in the city can in that window see himself as others see him.

—Judge Patten has been appointed as clerk of the municipal court, John Menzies, son of Hon. James Menzies. He is a young man of sterling worth, and will fill the position to the satisfaction of all.

—The committee of arrangements for the Fourth have secured as orator for the occasion, President J. W. Stearns, of the Whitewater Normal school. Rev. Dr. Hodge is to serve as chaplain, and Miss Minerva Guernsey will read the Declaration of Independence.

—Those intending to go to Madison with the excursion from this city on the 10th of July, to attend the Saengerfest, should purchase their tickets before the noon of the 8th, so that the committee may have time to secure sufficient cars for their accommodation.

—Now that the line of march for the Fourth of July parade is announced, it is expected that all those who are inconvenienced by having the show brought before their own doors, will express their appreciation by preparations to decorate their buildings with flags, etc.
